

Friendship Ambassadors Foundation has begun a speaking tour focusing on International Cultural Exchange...
Featuring FAF's Executive Director, Patrick Sciarratta, and titled:

‘Engage’: A Star Trek Approach to Travel in the 21st Century

Presented on a sliding fee scale to academic and nonprofit institutions

Topics covered by Mr. Sciarratta include: Should you fear international or even domestic touring? A Short History of Cultural Exchange since World War 2. Wither Global Tourism in Uncertain Times? Intercultural exchange and the Search for Peace in Times of War; and a unique look at the role of the arts in conflict and resolution at the 21st Century.

FAF has prepared a provocative post-9/11 talk and discussion of an emerging area for study and development. Americans woke up on September 11 to a new world where their sense of independence was challenged but also where their leadership was reaffirmed in strange ways, As the only remaining superpower, Americans are facing questions never before considered in a new world order where cultures matter as much as, or even more than, nation states. Whether we fear the future or anticipate new changes and even opportunities from it, this is a future we did not anticipate before one day in the early fall that changed our lives forever. How academic and cultural organizations respond will make all the difference in the world.

If your future travel plans are in flux or your community in debate over concert or educational tours in the coming years, please contact the foundation arrange for a visit; we'll discuss real timetables, options, and precautions for the future!

Mr. Sciarratta is also lead faculty for the Purchase College (State University of New York), Management for Nonprofit Arts Program; Mr. Sciarratta was President Clinton's Presidential Delegate to the first ever White House Conference on Travel and Tourism; he is also a MacArthur Awardee, with a Masters Degree in Theatre Anthropology as a Gallatin scholar at New York University, where he studied under noted anthropologist Victor Turner. Patrick has been seen or heard on CNN .COM, The New York Times, EEC, WOR TV, and PES. RECENT ALKS INCLUDE: Savannah State University, Agnes Scott College, Bulgaria International Tourism Conference, United nations, International Leadership Conference, Geneva Peace Through Tourism Conference; please call for current scheduling.
